The special dispatch of the Battimore Americanisava . Every exertion is now made by the party lash to drive the Senators who are "suspected," finted the party fraces. They are denounced and threatened a litis deplaced that Mr. Fessender, and Mr. Tramball theve 'organized' a conspiracy' to defeat the Radical party. The Baltimore American says: I Whether the vote will be taken on Saturday will depend on contingencies; the first of which is the health of Senator Howard. But it will not be taken, even with Mr. Howard present, unless the position of certain Senators is previously understood. This is, also, significant. The "whippers in" are now busy in their calculations, counting their men, prging up the 'laggards,' bullying independent Senators, and doing everything in the matter that ought not to be done.

The amendatory Tax bill was yesterday re ported to the House of Representatives by the Committee of Ways and Means. The following ate some of oits principle features . It makes the Internal Revenue Burea T independent of the Treasury Department, so far as making appointments and the workings of the Department are concerned; the sole power is vested in the Commissioner. The tax on cigars is doubled making it from five to ten dollars per thousand. "The tobacco tax is unchanged.-Ale is taxed one dollar per barrel; petroleum ten cents per gallon. The speech of Senator Grimes delivered in secret session, against the Impeachment, is a concluded with this manly and honorable sentiment: "I cannot suffer my judgment of the law governing this case to be influenced by political considerations. I cannot agree to destroy the harmonious working of the Constituble President. Whatever may be my opinion of the incumbent, I cannot consent to trifle with the high office he holds. I can do noth ing which, by implication, may be construed future political machinery."

About two years ago, in the Senate, the Colorado bill, which had been vetoed by the President, was under discussion. Mr. Doolittle and other Senators asked that the vote be postponed for one day to enable Mr. Dixon, who was opposed to the bill, and who was detained by sickness, to be present. Said Mr. Wade: "I am not willing to wait for any sick man; I am not in favor of giving any assistance to our enemies but I am in favor of taking all the chances which God Almighty has given us.' Compare this with the action of the Senate, vesterday. Suppose Mr. Wade's logic had been applied, in his own case?

Speaking of Mr. John L. Marye, jr., of Fredericksburg, the Conservative candidate for Attorney General of the State, the Richmond Dispatch says, he is worthy to be associated with Colonel Withers. Every effort is now being made by outside pressure to operate upon the Senate: Ttelegrams from partizans are pouring in, radical meetings are being held, extremists are impudently proposing that the refractory Senators should resign; some are simplored, some are threatened, some violently denounced .-And all this to Senators, sworn to try a case, and to render a verdict according to the law and the festimony!! Never was there such a spectacle in any civilized country.

In the House of Representatives, yesterday, Mr. Mungen, a member of the Committee of Investigation into the treatment of Federal soldiers in Southern prisons, stated that he was able to prove that the Confederate authorities had offered three times their value in cotton and tobacco for medicines to be used, for the prisoners at Andersonville, under the control of Federal surgeons. Mr. M. stated that he made this statement simply as a matter of justice."

We should suppose that there is but one proper course to be pursued by Senators of the U.S., when they are approached by individuals requesting them to resign, if they will not vote for the conviction of the President. That course must be obvious. There is generally, a door that can be opened -and generally, too, a leg and a foot that can be used and a kick vigorously applied in the right direction can soon elear a room of an intruder.

ANNIVERSARY WEEK IN NEW YORK .- The list of anniversaries this week includes those of the American Seamen's Friend Society, the Howard Mission and Home for Little Wander ers, the American Missionary Association. the Conference for Tax Reform, a very practically "religious" reform, the American Tract Society, the American Anti-Slavery Society (whose occupation, like Othello's, we had imagined, with Mr. Garrison, was gone with the abolition of slavery), the American Home Missionary Society, the National Temperance Society, the Institution for Deaf and Dumb and the New York Institution for the Blind, the American and Foreign Christian Union, the American Congregational Union, the American Equal Rights Association (the vague mystery of its name may stimulate public curiosity), and last, but by no means least, the Universal Peace Society, which will meet at a most inauspicious moment, when Ku Klux Klans and Union Leaguers seem to be awaiting either the conviction or the acquittal of the President of the United States; when our Western Indians have just started afresh on the warpath; when Mr. Pike wants to send a naval squadron to the northeastern coast of British America; when Mexico is rent with revolutionary convulsions; when France is hesitating whether it is yet too late to insist on the dismantling of the formidable fortresses of the Prussian quadrilateral; when the Eastern question is as far as ever from its ultimate solution; when, in fine, the whole world is full of wars or rumors of war! Perhaps, however, the Universal Peace Society may miraculously usher in the long expected millennium. At tract a vast number of visitors to the city. Col. Robert Edmund Withers. A correspondent of the Norfolk Journal furnishes that paper with the following sketch Robert E. Withers, the Conservative of Col. candidate for Governor of Virginia.

When the war broke out, Col. Withers was a prominent and successful physician, applying himself and unceasingly to the duties of his profession. He was a prominent member of the Old Line Whig party in Southwestern Virginia, and consequently belonged to the Conservative element of Virginia politics.— He was an ardent and devoted champion of the Union, and rigidly maintained his opinions on that subject in the face of opposition and defiance until Virginia, in sovereign Convention, severed her connection with the Federal Jovernment, and then it was that his ardent devotion to his State developed itself in deeds of noble daring and enthusiastic valor, in defence of the destinies of the South.

When the bugle's blast was sounded calling Virginia's heroes to her council fires, Col. Withers immediately offered his services to his State. He left Dazville in command of a battalion of two companies (the "Blues" and "Greys,") and reported to Colonel Baldwin, Inspector of Virginia Forces at Richmond, and was assigned with his command to the camp of of instruction for drill and organization. He was soon afterwards appointed colonel and ordered to the command of the 18th Virginia regiment, in which position he carved a name for himself and regiment for prowess and devotion searcely equalled and never surpassed in the bright annals of Confederate glory .-Whether under Johnston at Winchester, Beauregard at Manassas, or Lee on the Peninsula, Col. Withers was always at the post of duty, and never failed to acquit himself with distinguished merit and ability. At the battle of Gaines's Mill, in the charge of Pickett's brigade, he was severely wounded in several places, and it was thought for a long time that he could not possibly survive the effects of his wounds. Nor did he ever recover, but as soon as he could limpt upon his crutches was assigned to duty as commander of the post at Danville, Va., which post he filled with his usual sagacity until the Confederate forces surrendered their cause upon the banks of the Appomattox. When the war closed, being unable on account of his wounds to pursue the active duties of his profession, he accepted the editorial control of the Lynchburg News-one of the ablest and most interesting public journals in this State. This position he now

As a gentleman, Colonel Withers belongs to that olden type of the Virginia gentleman, of whose fame we have read so much, but whose virtues we seldom see exemplified in these de generate days. Kind, hospitable and genial in his nature, with a reputation for honesty and sincerity never surpassed in the social or political circle, his private and public charac ter stands above reaproach. As a physician, Colonel Withers strnds eminent in his profession. As an orator, he is chaste is diction, eloquent in voice and gesture, rich in thought and fervid in imagination; and for practical sense and logic he never fails to leave a happy impression upon the minds of his audience. If Col. Withers has never figured promi nently in the politics of his whole State, it is because he has studiously avoided all alluraments, preferring the quiet walks of private life to the bustle and strife of the political arena. The Conservative Convention could not have made a better nomination; could not have selected a gentleman more eminently qualified to fill the responsible trust or one who can go before the people with a brighter or more spotless record. It is true that he cannot swallow the "iron-clad"—that he would not do if he could. But he was a prominent member of the Conservative Union party before the war, and has, since the close of it, conducted himself in such a manner as must have secured the plaudits of even his enemies.

OUTRAGEOUS AFFAIR AT LEXINGTON. -The particularsof an outrageous affair at Lexington, Va., reached here yesterday, which as far as we have been able to ascertain are as follows: On Friday night a young son of Judge Brockenbrough, aged about nineteen years, was escorting his mother home from church. The residence is some little distance out of town, and is reached by a narrow plank footway. About midway between the town and the house they encountered a negro man and two women. Some words occurred as to which should give way. Finally, the women discovering the lady to be Mrs. Brockenbrough said politely that they did not know that it was her, and got out of the way for her to pass. The man, however, was obstinate and insulting. Young Mr. Brockenbough said, as they passed on, that he would see him again. After accompanying his mother home he returned towards the town and meeting a negro asked him if he was the man who insulted him. The negro replied that he was, and a the same time drew his pistol and fired. The ball took effect in the breast of Mr. Brockenbrough, and at first it was feared the wound would prove fatal, but at last accounts it was believed by the surgeon that no vital point had been touched, and that he would recover. Great excitement was caused by the affair, and some demonstrations looking towards summary vengeance were commenced by the students, but were arrested by the interposition of cooler heads, and the negro was committed to jail.—Lynchburg Virginian.

THE HOMESTEAD "EXEMPTION."-- The Virginia General Assembly, on the 29th of April, 1867, passed a homestead law, from which we extract the first section, as follows: "Be it enacted by the General Assembly That every householder, or head of a family shall be entitled to hold, exempt from levy, seizure or sale, under any order, execution, judgment, decree or other process rendered or ssued by any court, judge or justice of the peace, a homestead not exceeding ONE HUN-DRED AND SIXTY ACRES OF LAND, including the buildings thereon, and not exceeding the value of twelve hundred dollars."

This is the law which is similar in its provi sions to those of the Northern and some of the Southern States, and which is regarded as constitutional and binding. The late "Convention" have abrogated this law and substituted another in its stead whose provisions are so clearly unconstitutional that even the best Radical lawyer in that body did not besitate to denounce it as "a snare and delusion." If the proposed "Constitution" be adopted the people of Virginia lose the benefit of their present homestead law and get only this miserable provision of the "Constitution," which could not stand an hour in any court, as has been repeatedly decided, and which, as Judge Socad said, "is not worth the paper on which it is written."—Rich. Enq.

SPECIE PAYMENTS .- The New York Post discussing the ways and means of returning to specie payments, says : " wins o'P-

It has long been certain that our currency cannot be gladually brought to a specie value by a mere process of continuous contraction. The policy has been carried far enough by Mr. McCulloch to reveal its worthlessness, and any further prosecution of it would only cause revulsions in public confidence, and ruinous fluctuations in all the markets, without contributing anything to the solution of the real difficulties of the case. An essential preliminary step to further contraction is the modification of the legal-tender act so that gold and silver can again be used as money among persons who desire it. The people will then have another currency to take the place of greenbacks, and can afford to fund these as fast as Molasses.
